McLean Little League celebrated their opening day on Saturday, with a huge contingent of fans on hand to watch their teams play.

The league, which was originally formed in 1955, has about 1,080 players currently enrolled. It has also produced several impressive players over the years, on both the high school and pro level, including Danny Reed, who is currently in the Detroit Tigers organization.

For a full listing of all the McLean Major League teams as well as their rosters and more on the league's history, check out Batter up!, section C. For more photos of opening day, see Page A3.

NEW SEASON: The Memory Makers and the Volcano play their first teeball game.
